

The Irish Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy

The Irish Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy, established in 1981, identifies, develops and maintains professional standards of excellence in counselling and psychotherapy through education, training and accreditation. In promoting best practice and the professional development of its members, IACP holds the protection of the public at its core.

Counselling and psychotherapy in Ireland have come a long way, and this book serves as a celebration of what has been achieved, and a tribute to all of those who have been a part of IACP since its beginnings 30 years ago.
